the main purpose of this research topic is to analyze and identify the main family and contextual variables that are involved in the process of carrying out homework this will require studying the role played by teachers students and families in order to ensure that schoolwork is a useful learning tool although the role of the student is obviously crucial in homework research has focused on the cumulative time spent by the student carrying out homework however the time spent on homework is not in itself evidence of the student s involvement nor is time spent indicative of quality time indeed an excess of time can sometimes denote low competence in a field of knowledge while spending less time on homework could be indicative of high competence it is more likely that a high dedication of time spent on homework reflects high motivation or comprehension deficits rather than commitment to learning or academic motivation in tandem with the role of the student teachers as responsible for prescribing homework assignments for students also become central players in the process of completing homework assignments the decisions that teachers make about homework prescriptions and the amount and type of tasks they set will determine to a large extent the quality of the homework process including the student s motivation and the student s level of engagement with homework furthermore the fact that homework is useful interesting and motivating for students will depend on how the teacher prescribes those tasks and the connection established with classroom learning teacher feedback also acquires particular relevance for this point by helping the students to accurately estimate the quality of their progress and overcome the difficulties they may have encountered in carrying out their homework lastly the effectiveness of teacher feedback depends on its contribution to the student s educational progress and how that student will perform in the future in addition to the student who performs the task and the teacher who prescribes and corrects it we must not lose sight of parents role although there are discrepancies regarding the role that parents play in relation to homework it is evident that their implication has important consequences not only on the final result of those tasks but also on the very process of carrying them out everything seems to indicate that the family environment and more specifically the support and feedback provided by parents is a factor that can determine the involvement of students in school duties in this way providing emotional support encouraging children to get involved can contribute positively to improving their motivation and interest in the performance of homework the objective of this research topic is to provide researchers and professionals in psychology and education settings with some of the most recent empirical evidence regarding the homework process its prescription and correction overall we aim to cease making homework a source of conflict and controversy at the socio educational level in order to provide useful instruments for improving the quality of student learning this work was developed with the financing of the research projects edu2013 44062 p mineco edu2017 82984 p meic homework is not new since the mid nineteenth century it has been used to supplement the school curriculum moving in and out of fashion according to the political climate pupils do not enjoy doing homework but they believe that it is important in helping them do well at school what is the evidence for the effectiveness of homework susan hallam s extensive review of the literature on homework starts with a brief overview of the history nature and purpose of homework and then reviews research on its effect on pupils attainment she then describes the findings of studies that compare homework with no homework or with supervised homework and international and uk studies looking at the relationships between time spent on homework and attainment further chapters explore different types of homework and their effects and teachers pupils and parents perspectives on homework the final chapter considers the future of homework including interventions to support pupils and proposes a model providing a framework for thinking about homework on balance it seems likely that children will still be asked to undertake homework but schools must take the lead in redefining the homework agenda and putting student learning at its centre with critical issues like desegregation and funding facing our schools dissatisfaction with public education has reached a new high teachers decry inadequate resources while critics claim educators are more concerned with job security than effective teaching though urban education has reached crisis proportions contending players have difficulty agreeing on a common program of action this book tells why changing urban education confronts the prevailing naivete in school reform by examining the factors that shape reinforce or undermine reform efforts edited by one of the nation s leading urban scholars it examines forces for change and resistance in urban education and proposes that the barrier to reform can only be overcome by understanding how schools fit into the broader political contexts of their cities much of the problem with our schools lies with the reluctance of educators to recognize the profoundly political character of public education the contributors show how urban political contexts vary widely with factors like racial composition the role of the teachers union and relations between cities and surrounding metropolitan areas presenting case studies of original field research in baltimore chicago houston and six other urban areas they consider how resistance to desegregation and the concentration of the poor in central urban areas affect education and they suggest how cities can build support for reform through the involvement of business and other community players by demonstrating the complex interrelationship between urban education and politics this book shows schools to be not just places for educating children but also major employers and large spenders of tax dollars it also introduces the concept of civic capacity the ability of educators and non educators to work together on common goals and suggests that this key issue must be addressed before education can be improved changing urban education makes it clear to educators that the outcome of reform efforts depends heavily on their political context as it reminds political scientists that education is a major part of the urban mix while its prognosis is not entirely optimistic it sets forth important guidelines that cannot be ignored if our schools are to successfully prepare children for the future many parents don t realize the critical role they play in working with the teacher to help their children succeed in school with this new 2nd edition you can give life to this vital relationship and generate commitment even from the most reluctant parents this book addresses situations ranging from planning for the first day of school to homework issues parent conferences difficult situations and more contains sample scripts checklists worksheets and sample letters to send home to parents
